READY for lift off: Leverstock Green war memorial was hoisted up by a crane and moved from the position it has occupied on the comer of Bedmond Road since 1921. The original position was considered too noisy for ceremonies and there was not enough room for people to gather around. The memorial is now sited opposite the church on Church Road. "It now has a new position with a paved area around it which is wonderful."
A time capsule, which included a potted history of Lew stock Green, was buried under the capsule.
